Fullerton voters in City Council Districts 3 and 5 this November get to choose among three candidates in each race. We are endorsing Arnel Dino in District 3 and Oscar Valadez in District 5. We like it that both have real-world experience in business, not just in government. They understand what regular people and businesses go through having to put up with high taxes and too much government regulation.

Such experience especially will be useful as the coming national recession hits Fullerton. Tough choices will have to be made.

Dino is a businessman who has lived in Fullerton 40 years. He currently serves as vice chair of the city Planning Commission and was on the city's Infrastructure and Natural Resources Committee, among several other positions. For civic actions, he serves as a board member of the Boys and Girls Club of Fullerton.

"One of my priorities would be to find ways we can attract new businesses to the city," he told us. Another priority is "to address the infrastructure in the city so that more roads, sewers, and sidewalks can be fixed."

Valadez was born and raised in District 5 and has lived there 50 years. A Stanford grad, he currently is a commissioner with the Orange County Transportation Authority and a construction supervisor. He described himself to us "as a trusted housing provider with 25 years of experience navigating our cities, and public servant for Orange County families. My community is calling upon leaders like me to solve our housing crisis."

Sourcing & Methodology

To help you make decisions about the numerous candidates, measures, propositions and other races on your ballot, our editorial board (made up of opinion writers and editors), makes recommendations every election. The process is completely separate from newsroom reporting and journalists. With the exception of our executive editor, the members of our editorial board are not news reporters or editors.

Sal Rodriguez, the opinion editor for the Southern California News Group's 11 newspapers, heads the editorial board and guides our stances on public policy and political matters.

Every week, our team analyzes legislation, monitors political developments, interviews elected officials or policy advocates and writes editorials on the issues of the day. Unsigned editorials reflect the consensus of our editorial board, with the aim of offering arguments that are empirically sound and intellectually consistent.

We apply this same process when considering to endorse candidates.

As a practical matter, we are selective in which races we endorse in. We endorse on all statewide ballot measures, competitive congressional races, select races for the state legislature and select countywide and city elections.

We identify credible candidates through surveys and interviews, deliberate based on our editorial precedent and in light of contemporary realities, and issue endorsements accordingly.

The Editorial Board

The editorial board and opinion section staff are independent of the news-gathering side of our organization. Through our staff-written editorials, we take positions on important issues affecting our readership, from pension reform to protecting our region's unique natural resources to transportation. The editorials are unsigned because, while written by one or more members of our staff, they represent the point of view of our news organization's management. In order to take informed positions, we meet frequently with government, community and business leaders on important issues affecting our cities, region and state. During elections, we meet with candidates for office and the proponents and opponents of ballot initiatives and then make recommendations to voters.
